

REVEREND HUGGER AT CONEY BLAMES IT ALL ON DRINK

"Couldn't Have Happened!"
Exclaims Dominic Wilson,
Amazed at Tale of Spree.

SELECTED WRONG GIRL.

Attempt to Embrace Policeman's Companion Fatal
Error of Joy-Seeker.

A very stoutish elderly man, gray haired and with whiskers of coarse wire covering the round collar of his "dustman" coat, stood before Magistrate Hyman in Coney Island Court today to plead guilty to the charge of intoxication. He said he was the Rev. Cecil St. Wilson, an Episcopal clergyman of Brooklyn, Pa., and that he had been enjoying a vacation in New York, which terminated abruptly in a cell of the Coney Island station last night.

The complaint against the Rev. Wilson was presented August 5th. The charge against him was that he had been drinking and was in a state of intoxication when he attempted to embrace a police officer's companion. The charge was read to him and he pleaded guilty.

"I was getting off a car of the Brooklyn and Coney Island line at West Fifth street with a woman friend," the priest testified. "She was my sister-in-law and we had come to Coney. When I got off the car I saw a crowd around the policeman, who was standing on his feet and clapping his hands."

"I thought there was nothing to it but a happy scene until I saw him go up to a woman and fondle her. Then he went up to another woman and tried to put his arm about her waist, clapping his hands all the time. I told my companion to stand where she was and I would go and get a line on what the scene was doing."

"But he came up to my friend and tried to put his arm about her waist and then I arrested him."

The reverend priest vehemently denied to Magistrate Hyman that he had been drinking. He said he was a clergyman and that he had been in the city for some time. He said he had been in the city for some time and that he had been in the city for some time.

ONE KILLED 16 CHOKED BY POWDER FUMES

Accident Happens 750 Feet Underground in New Aqueduct.

The man was killed and sixteen nearly suffocated to death 750 feet underground in the section of the new aqueduct under Doolittle street and Madison street when powder fumes following an explosion overcame the blasting gang which entered under Foreman Carroll.

There had been blasts set off at 6 o'clock and 6:30 o'clock A. M. in a spur of the aqueduct which runs under Madison street. The fatal explosion took place about seven o'clock in the section under charge of Holbrook Cabot & Kellie of No. 31 Madison avenue.

Foreman Carroll had entered with his crew of drill runners and dynamite men, when one of them smelled a strongly choking odor. At once there was a shout of warning and all the experienced men threw themselves flat on the earth, fighting for the purer air which is close to the ground. Foreman Carroll, who is powerful, elected to hold his breath while making the run and climb for help, and left his man lying flat.

He reached Dr. Hunter, who lives underground for hot such accidents, and a relief crew was hastily summoned. All the men were dragged out of the danger hole and brought in elevators to the street, where they were revived with the exception of one, a negro, James Royce of No. 26 East Twenty-seventh street.

The body of the victim was removed to the morgue under Coroner Heelan's orders, where an autopsy will be held.

Sam Allen, superintendent of the section, declared to the police this is the first time in his experience that black powder acted in such a manner.

McDonald Gets Back His Property. The property of James P. McDonald, sometimes known as the "Uncrowned King of Hayti" because of his heavy industrial operations in the Haytian Republic, is no longer being held in security to insure the payment of alimony to the railroad promoter's wife. Supreme Court Justice Donnelly today signed an order releasing it.

Big House Burns to Death. Eight men were burned to death early today in a fire that destroyed a two-story frame stable at No. 46 East New York avenue, Brooklyn, belonging to John Fannin, who lives in the house next door. The blaze spread so rapidly it was impossible to reach any of the horses. The damage was about $10,000.

Kiddies in Greenwich To Have Baby Contest, Beginning on Monday

Sixty Tots Examined in Brooklyn—Judging Will Take Several Days, and Prize Awards Will Be Announced Next Week.

Just two more days and the babies of Greenwich Village will come into this world.

Ever since the big city wide series of Better Babies Contests inaugurated by The Evening World and the Babies' Welfare Association began on July 1, the mothers of the famous old district have been clamoring for a chance to prove the excellence of their children.

The fact that Chelsea, the neighborhood to the immediate north, had put 800 chubby representatives in the race for the title of New York's finest baby only spurred Old Greenwich the more. It demanded a contest from Greenwich House, at No. 38 Jones street, the local member of the Babies' Welfare Association, and, what's more, it got it.

So next Monday the race begins. Every child from three months to five years of age living in the contest district is eligible. And the district is a big one. It extends from North River and Fourteenth East, to Fifth avenue, to Washington Square, to Broadway, to Canal street and west again to North River. Registration of entrants will go on until Sept. 1 inclusive at Greenwich House, No. 38 Jones street, and at the milk station, No. 78 Ninth avenue. The hours for registration will be announced in a few days by Miss Mabel Foster, headworker at Greenwich House.

In the meantime the 800 kiddies who entered the race in the Chelsea district are all in training for their judging contests which will be held in three public schools early in October. In the district there are five milk stations, five day nurseries and four dispensaries, and these places have never been so busy as store the baby contests opened. At each of these helpful places mothers are being taught how to get their children in condition to win one of The Evening World's prizes.

"This is one of the best features of the contests," said Garret Smith, Executive Secretary of the Babies' Welfare Association, today.

MILK STATIONS BECOME CENTERS OF WELFARE WORK.

"As the infant milk stations are becoming more and more the centers of infant welfare work throughout the city it is the aim to have them co-operate as much as possible in these contests. Leaflets advertising the contests and little booklets giving full advice to mothers on how to keep them well. There are seventy-eight of these milk stations in the Greater City. They are not as people suppose, places where milk is given away to poor mothers. In the first place the milk is sold to mothers at a fair price, in the second place the main object of the milk stations is educational.

In the fifty-five stations conducted by the Division of Child Hygiene of the Board of Health, as well as all the stations run by private agencies like the New York Diet Kitchen Association, Nurses' Settlement and the Babies' Aid Association, there is a doctor and a nurse in regular attendance. The nurse gives the mother regular lessons in every phase of baby and nurse her to nurse her own baby, if possible. The doctor weighs and examines the baby once a week and gives prompt warning if there is anything the matter with it, and also tells the mother what food formula the child needs from time to time in cases where the mothers are unable to nurse the babies themselves.

Over in Brooklyn at the play grounds of School 124, Fourth avenue and Fourteenth street, the work, begun Monday, of judging the 400 hopefuls in that race went on merrily all day yesterday, and at the closing hours, sixty tots had been examined and scored by the physicians. It will take a week to complete the task of judging the young hopes and a week later prizes will be awarded.

At the Little Mothers' Aid, No. 288 Second avenue, sixteen new aspirants for baby honors were registered. Among them was a little Syrian child, Fred Fasha, nineteen months of age, a black haired curly tot who some day will be told that his mother was a suicide by drowning when he was but one month old. At this centre 34 entrants are in the race and registration will continue until Aug. 12. This afternoon at four o'clock Dr. Rudolph B. Moffitt will address the mothers of the entrants on "Infant Feeding."
